Preface

Knowing one's counterparts, who they are, how they got there, and who their replacements might be, is important to both leadership and organizations alike. This report provides an overview of the political commissars of the PLA Air Force and is a companion to CASI's report on the commanders of the PLAAF.

In July 2015, Lieutenant General Yu Zhongfu became the 13th Political Commissar (PC) of the People's Liberation Army (PLA) Air Force (PLAAF) since 1949. He also concurrently serves as the Secretary of the Standing Committee of the PLAAF's Party Committee. He received his third star with the rank of General in July 2017.ⁱ His current grade is Theater Command leader. He is expected to remain in this billet until summer 2021, at which time he will meet his mandatory retirement age of 65.

This report provides an overview of his predecessors, his career, how PCs are selected, and the role that the PLA Air Force Political Commissar plays. It also identifies the nine PLAAF officers who are eligible to replace him in 2021; however, a current non-Air Force officer could also be selected.

In addition, it provides examples of the types of meetings that Yu Zhongfu has attended since becoming the PC, which include meetings that focus on Communist Party-related issues and meetings that do not focus on Party issues, such as visits to units and participation in training conferences. Finally, the report discusses the PLAAF PC's involvement in military diplomacy.

The bottom line is that nothing is simple in the PLA and there are no clear patterns to becoming the next PC. However, it is important to understand the history of how the thirteen PLAAF PCs reached that position, which at least provide some grounds for speculation.

We hope you find this report useful as we continue to try and better understand the People's Liberation Army, who they are, what they want, and what makes them tick.

ⁱ As of 2021, the PLA does not have a four-star General rank.

Laying the Foundation

There are no clear patterns to becoming the next Political Commissar (PC) of the PLA Air Force. As such, this section discusses the overall career paths for PLAAF officers (aka cadres) in general since 1949, to include joining the PLA, becoming a political officer, education, the PLA's 15-grade and 10-rank system, and changes to the mandatory retirement age.

Joining the PLA and Academic Education¹

In order to understand where the PLA's and the PLAAF's personnel system is today, it is important to identify the educational levels for PLA officers during several different periods.² Specifically, in the period between the founding of the Red Army in 1927 and the founding of the People's Republic of China (PRC) in 1949, only a small portion of officers were extricated from illiteracy while the majority of them were still illiterate. When the PRC was established in 1949, the PLA had 5.5 million troops. At that time, the enlisted force consisted primarily of illiterate peasant volunteers, and the ratio of officers to enlisted members was about 1:1.³

In 1950, the PLA had 57 officer institutions, a number that rose to 246 by 1956.⁴ During the 1950s, most officers were still illiterate or barely literate.⁵ Therefore, at that time, the main content of the training classes set up by the units was teaching people how to read and write.⁶ Starting in 1950, most officers only studied for six months to two years before they received a high-school equivalent certificate, which focused on reading and writing as well as Communist Party ideology. They then assumed their operational billet with only a little specialty training. The PLA shut down a high proportion of its academic institutions, including technical schools, during the Cultural Revolution (1956-1966). The number of academic institutions was reduced from 246 in 1957 to 116 in 1965.⁷ In the late 1960s, 93.4 percent of officers had lower than a high-school educational level. In December 1978, there were still 91.9 percent of officers with less than a high-school level of educational.

Until 1982, a high proportion of officers joined the PLA voluntarily and began as enlisted personnel for up to three years (ages 15-17), at which time they received a direct promotion as an officer based on political reliability rather than operational capabilities, doing so without any formal education.⁸ The PLAAF ceased this program in 1982, such that all officers had to graduate from one of the PLA academic institutions with a secondary, post-secondary, or bachelor's degree. Even so, a high proportion of officers still came from the enlisted ranks, but they had to attend an academic institution before they received their officer promotion. The situation underwent quite a tremendous change in the late 1980s, when 42.3 percent of officers had received education in program at or above the level of college, i.e., a two- to three-year post-secondary program or a four-year bachelor's degree.ⁱⁱ In 2000, that figure had risen as high as 71.8 percent. The PLA did not stop offering high school equivalency degrees for officers at its academic institutions until 1995.

Under Deng Xiaoping's guidance, distrust of educated officers began to fade in the early 1980s. For example, during an interview in 1985, PLAAF Commander Zhang Tingfa, who was a career political officer and who had served as the PLAAF PC before becoming the commander, discussed changes by saying, "People throughout our country are talking about respecting knowledge and talented people, and taking loving care of intellectuals. So is the PLAAF, because knowledge and talented people are indispensable for the modernization of our troops."⁹ By 1986, the PLA as a whole had increased the number of academic institutions from 115 in 1977; however, the system was downsized yet again to 67 in 1998. That number was further reduced to 34 in 2017.¹⁰

Functional and Administrative Political Departments and Divisions

Within the PLA, the highest functional and administrative political organization was the General Political Department (GPD) until 2016 when it was renamed the Central Military Commission (CMC) Political Work Department (PWD). Below the GPD / CMC PWD level, there have been Political Departments (now PWD) at the service, Military Region (MR) (now Theater Command (TC),) corps, division, and brigade levels. At the regiment level, there are Political Divisions and now Political Work Divisions. Together, these organizations are identified as 1st-level functional and administrative "departments", each of which have 2nd- and 3rd-level "departments" (bureaus, divisions, offices, or branches). There are not any functional and administrative "departments" below the regiment level.

Officers who fill the leadership billets (i.e., director or deputy director) in each of these "departments" begin their career as cadets in a political academic institution. They then work their way up their career as staff officers or leaders in the 1st-, 2nd-, and 3rd-level "departments" at the regiment and above level. Very rarely do any of them become the political instructor at the company level, political director at the battalion level, or political commissar at the regiment and above levels.

Becoming a Political Officer¹¹

A high percentage of political officers who serve as commanding and deputy commanding officersⁱⁱⁱ at the company and battalion level are selected from company-grade officers who have ⁱⁱ The PLA uses the term "university/college graduate" (大学毕业生) as a generic term that includes personnel with a three-year, post-secondary diploma (大专 / 大专毕业生) or a four-year bachelor's degree (本科 / 本科毕业生).

ⁱⁱⁱ The PLA uses the term "commanding officer" for anyone in a leadership position. This is distinct from a unit "Commander". So, the head of the Training Department would be called a "commanding officer" but is not a commander".

been Communist Party members since they were cadets and are already serving in the military/command track; however, some political officers also come from the logistics, equipment, and special technical track. As a result, new political officers already have some operational experience at the “grassroots” level (e.g., battalion and below). They continue to build on this experience as members of the unit’s Party Committee and Standing Committee throughout the rest of their careers.

As a general rule, political officers who become unit political leaders or deputies at the company level have not received any formal education or training to become a political officer. Based on a review of biographic information for the PLAAF PCs who joined the PLA after 1949, the only formal political officer professional military education they receive occurs through either an in-residence course at one of the political colleges/academies or an in-residence or correspondence course from the Central Party School for officers at the regiment-level and above. Political officers at the level of division and above also attend an in-residence, joint-service course at the PLA National Defense University, but the focus of the course is not on political work.

Meanwhile, almost all political division/department directors and deputy directors, as well as political staff officers at every level, begin as cadets in one of the services’ political colleges/academies and then receive their intermediate-level education there as well. The Air Force Command College also has undergraduate cadet programs for political staff officers. While these officers move up their career path in the Political Department (now Political Work Department) as a staff officer or the deputy director or director of a second- or third-level functional and administrative department, they rarely become a PC.

Military Diplomacy

The PLA’s GPD, which is currently the CMC PWD, did not become actively involved in the PLA’s foreign exchange program until 1988, when the GPD Director, General Yang Baibing, traveled to East Germany and the PLAAF’s PC, Lieutenant General Zhu Guang, followed immediately thereafter with a trip to the United States.¹² One of the primary reasons for this lag is that officers visiting abroad from the GPD system presented a challenge to the foreign relations program. Specifically, except for visits to other communist countries that also have a PC system, it has been difficult determining who the PCs’ counterparts are and what they would discuss.

A unique situation arose in November 1988 when the PLAAF’s PC, Zhu Guang (1985-1992), who was PLAAF Commander Wang Hai’s co-equal in grade (military-region leader), but one rank lower, visited the United States.^{iv} Because the USAF doesn’t have a direct counterpart, Zhu’s host was the Secretary of the Air Force, Pete Aldridge, who had visited China in September

^{iv} During the visit, the author of this report was one of the escorts and had the opportunity to have lengthy one-on-one conversations with him at night and learned a lot about how the Political Commissar System works.

1987 along with the USAF Thunderbirds.¹³ In September 1988, the PLA re-instituted its rank system for the first time since it was abolished in 1966, so Zhu wore his new rank of lieutenant general.

As shown in the table below, although PLAAF PCs have traveled abroad to 16 countries since 1998, they apparently have not traveled every year.¹⁴ The only countries visited more than once are Russia (three times) and Cuba (two times), both of which are communist countries with military PCs, while no visits were made to any Asian countries. The last trip noted was in 2007. One reason Deng Changyou may not have traveled in 2008 was because of his involvement during the Sichuan earthquake and the Olympics; however, he did not travel at all during the last three years of his assignment either.

Although General Tian Xiusi became the PC during the 18th Party Congress in 2012 and General Yu Zhongfu became the PC in 2015, neither of them has traveled abroad. There is also no information indicating that they have hosted any foreign leaders.

Profiles of the Previous Thirteen Political Commissars

This section provides profiles of the PLAAF's 13 Political Commissars (PC) since 1949, including Yu Zhongfu, who became the 13th PC in July 2015. The information includes the following information in each profile: date of birth, date of death, place of birth, when he joined the PLA, his career path, when he received his rank promotions, and when he served as a member in the Chinese Communist Party's (CCP) Party Congress and National People's Congress (NPC).^v Table 8 in Appendix 1 shows how they fit into the structure during the PLAAF's Party Congresses, which occur every five years. As a result of inconsistent career paths, it is difficult to predict in advance who future PLAAF PCs will be, but this report provides a list of the most probable contenders to replace Yu Zhongfu in mid-2021, when he will reach his mandatory retirement age of 65.

1. Xiao Hua (萧华): 1916-1985; Xingguo, Jiangxi Province. He joined the Red Army in 1930. He served in various political officer positions in Red Army and PLA units until the PRC was formed in October 1949. He then served as the PLAAF's first PC for only six months from October 1949 to April 1950 (age 33). From 1950 until he retired in September 1983, he served as an Army officer in various positions in the General Political Department, the Academy of Military Science (AMS), and the CMC. He was a CMC member from 1956 to 1967. He received the rank of General in 1955, when ranks were implemented. He was a representative at the 8th Party congress (1956), and a Member of the 8th, 11th, and 12th Party Central Committees (1956, 1977, and 1982).¹⁵

2. Wu Faxian (吴发宪): 1915-2004; Yongfeng, Jiangxi Province. He joined the Red Army in 1930; served as a political officer in the Eighth Route Army and New Fourth Army; participated in Long March; served as a Deputy PC and Director of the Political Department in the 14th Bingtuan (14th Army), which became the core of the PLAAF in November 1949. In May 1950, Wu became a PLAAF Deputy PC and concurrently Director of the Political Department. For all practical purposes, he served as the PC, since Xiao Hua was transferred to the General Political Department (GPD) in April 1950. Wu officially became the PLAAF PC in February 1957 (age 42). In May 1965, he became the Commander and, in December 1967, was simultaneously assigned as a Deputy Chief of the ^v The PLA had a rank system from 1955 to 1965, at which time it was abolished. It did not implement a new rank system until 1988. Under the current system, there are only 1-star Major Generals (MGEN), 2-star Lieutenant Generals (LGEN), and 3-star Generals (GEN). There are no 4-star Generals.

General Staff and Deputy Director of the CMC's General Office. In April 1969, he became a Member of the CCP Politburo. He was a member of Defense Minister Lin Biao's clique during the Cultural Revolution and was arrested the day Defense Minister Lin Biao's aircraft crashed in Mongolia in September 1971 (age 56). He was kicked out of the Party in August 1973 and was sentenced to 17 years in prison in January 1981. He received the rank of Lieutenant General (LGEN) in 1955 when ranks were implemented. He was a representative at the 2nd and 3rd NPC (1959 and 1964) and a Member of the CCP 9th Party Congress' Politburo (1969).¹⁶

Note: The PLAAF did not have a Commander following Wu Faxian's arrest in September 1971 until Ma Ning became Commander in May 1973.

3. Yu Lijin (余立金): 1913-1978; Daye, Hubei Province. He joined the Red Army in 1928. Besides participating in the Long March, he served in various Red Army and PLA political officer positions through the late 1950s or early 1960s, when he was selected to be the PC of the Nanjing Military Region Air Force (MRAF). He then became a PLAAF Deputy PC while concurrently serving as the Nanjing MRAF PC. In May 1965 (age 52), he replaced Wu Faxian as the PLAAF's PC. In 1968 (age 55), he became the PC of the Civil Aviation Administration of China. He received the rank of LGEN in 1955 when ranks were implemented. He was a representative at the 8th and 11th Party Congress (1956 and 1977), and a representative at the 4th and 5th NPC (1975 and 1978).¹⁷

He received the rank of LGEN in 1955 when ranks were implemented. He was an alternate representative at 7th Party congress (1945), a representative at 9th Party Congress (1969), and a Member of 9th Central Committee.¹⁸

5. Fu Chuanzuo (傅传作): 1914-1982; Shishou, Hubei Province. He joined the Red Army in 1930. Besides participating in the Long March, he served in various Red Army and PLA political officer positions until 1950. From September 1950 to September 1955, he was the Commander of the Southwest (Xinan) MRAF. From August 1958 to September 1955, he also served concurrently as a Deputy Commander of the South Central (Zhongnan) MRAF and Commander of the Guangzhou command post.

From September 1955 to May 1973, he was the Commander of the Wuhan MRAF. From May 1973 (age 59) to October 1975 (age 61), he was the PLAAF PC and first Secretary of the PLAAF Party Committee. PLAAF Political Commissars' Career Paths

A review of the profiles for the 13 PLAAF PCs found the following patterns and differences:

- Most importantly, there is no clear path to becoming the PLAAF PC.
- It is not clear if any of the first eight PCs started their career as an enlisted member and then got a direct promotion as an officer (cadre) or if they got an automatic promotion when they joined the Red Army.
- The first PC (Xiao Hua) only served for six months after the PLAAF was established, and the next PC (Wu Faxian) was not assigned until 1957.
- The first eight PCs plus Tian Xiusi (#12) all began their careers in the army.
- Once they became a PLAAF officer, only two of them (Xiao Hua and Zhu Guang) shifted back and forth between the army and the PLAAF.
- Four of the last five PCs spent their entire career in the PLAAF.
- Qiao Qingchen is the only PC who began his career as a pilot.
- Only two of them served as an MRAF PC.
- The first four of them served as a deputy PC of the PLAAF. However, none of the last five served in this billet, while two of them served as the Director for the Political Department, which is the same grade as the Deputy PC.
- Five of them shifted between Commander and PC billets at different levels.
- Three of them served as the PLAAF PC and then became the PLAAF Commander.

CP = Command Post^{vi}; MRAF = Military Region Air Force; HD = Headquarters Department; PD = Political Department; DPC = Deputy Political Commissar; DCDR = Deputy Commander; CDR = Commander; DCS = Deputy Chief of Staff; CS = Chief of Staff^{vii}; and DIR = Director.^{viii}

^{vi} A Command Post is a corps-level headquarters.

^{vii} The Chief of Staff is the Director of the Headquarters Department and is the same grade as a Deputy Commander.

^{viii} The Director of the Political Department is the same grade as a Deputy Political Commissar and are oftentimes concurrent billets.

The following bullets show the years each PC served and their ages during that time. As noted earlier, in the early 1990s, the mandatory retirement age of 65 was implemented for MR leader-grade billets; however, there are always exceptions to the rule.

- Yu Lijin (1965-1968) served from age 52 to 55 but then moved to the Civil Aviation Administration.
- Wang Huiqiu (1968-1973) served from age 57 to 62 and then became the PC of the Shenyang MR.
- Fu Chuanzuo (1973-1975) served from age 59 to 61 and then retired.
- Zhang Tingfa (1975-1977) served from age 57 to 59 and then became the Commander of the PLAAF and retired at age 67.
- Gao Houliang (1977-1985) served from age 62 to 70 and then retired.
- Zhu Guang (1985-1992) served from age 63 to 70 and then retired.
- Ding Wenchang (1992-1999) served from age 59 to 63 and then retired.
- Qiao Qingchen (1999-2002) served from age 60 to 63 and then became the Commander of the PLAAF and retired at age 68.
- Deng Changyou (2002-2012) served from age 55 to 65 and then retired.
- Tian Xiusi (2012-2015) served from age 62 to 65 and then retired.
- Yu Zhongfu (2015-present) served starting at age 59.

The PC normally serves as the secretary for their unit's Party Standing Committee. However, if the commander has ever served as a political officer during his career, then he serves as the Secretary. For example, three PLAAF Commanders (Wu Faxian, Zhang Tingfa, and Qiao Qingchen) who had previously served as the PLAAF PC remained as the Secretary once they became the PLAAF Commander and in those cases, the PC served as the Deputy Secretary until the Commander retired, whereupon the PC then became the Secretary.

Possible Replacements for Yu Zhongfu

Although, as noted in this report so far, there has not been a clear path to becoming the PLAAF PC, a review of available information indicates that there are currently nine PLAAF officers who are potential candidates to replace Yu Zhongfu when he reaches age 65 in mid-2021.²⁸ Of note, all of them except Guo Puxiao are TC deputy leader grade officers with the rank of LGEN. Guo is a TC leader-grade officer with the rank of General (GEN). One other possible contender could be whoever is the current Secretary of the PLAAF Discipline Inspection Commission.

The following profiles are for the nine possible replacements for Yu Zhongfu identified in Table 6 above. Of note, although eight of them are Lieutenant Generals, no current photos showing them with two stars were found for any of them.

LGEN Cai Lishan (蔡立山) (b. unknown) He became the PC of the Northern TCAF Theater Air Force (TCAF) as well as a deputy PC of the Northern Theater Command (TC) in December 2019.²⁹ He previously served as the Director of the Beijing MRAF Political Departments' Organization Division. In 2007, he became the PC of the Beijing MRAF's 6th Surface-to-Air Missile Division (93605 unit). In July 2011, he became a Deputy PC in the PLAAF 15th Airborne Corps. In September 2014, he became the PC for the Fuzhou Command Post (Fujian Province, Nanjing MRAF). In July 2015, he became the Director of the Chengdu MRAF Political Department, which became the Western TCAF Political Work Department in January 2016. He received rank promotions in July 2012 (MGEN) and December 2019 (LGEN).

LGEN Chen Xuebin (陈学斌) (b. 1959, location unknown) He became the PLAAF's single Deputy PC in May 2018.^{ix30} Until he assumed his current billet, he was a career PLA Navy political officer with assignments involving naval aviation. He previously served as the Director of the Political Department in the North Sea Fleet's (NSF) 5th Air Division. He then became one of the Deputy PCs and then the PC in the same unit. In 2009, he then became a Deputy Director of the NSF Political Department. In July 2012, he became an NSF Deputy PC and concurrent PC for the NSF's Naval Aviation Headquarters. In December 2015, he then became the Secretary of the PLAN's Discipline Inspection Commission and a PLAN Party Standing Committee Member before becoming a PLAN Headquarters Deputy PC and concurrent Director of the Political Work Department in January 2018. He received a rank promotion in July 2010 (Rear Admiral) and July 2017 (Vice Admiral).^x When he switched services in May 2018, he received a “promotion” to Air Force LGEN. He was a Member of the CCP’s 19th Party Congress.

LGEN Du Yuanfang (堵远放) (b. unknown) He became the Director of the PLAAF Headquarters’ Political Work Department in January 2017.³¹ In the mid-to-late 2000s, he served as a Deputy Director and then Director of the PLAAF Headquarters’ Political Department’s Cadre Department. In July 2011, he became the PC of the Air Force Fuzhou Command Post (94788 unit) in the Guangzhou MRAF. In July 2013, he became the Director of the Guangzhou MRAF Headquarters’ Political Department. In September 2015, he became a Deputy Director of the PLAAF Headquarters’ Political Department, which became the Political Work Department in January 2016. He received rank promotions in July 2012 (MGEN) and July 2018 (LGEN). He was a Member of the CCP’s 19th Party Congress.

GEN Guo Puxiao (郭普校) (b. 1964, Shaanxi Province) He became the PC of the CMC Logistic Support Department in December 2019 with the grade of TC leader.³² In 1981, he graduated from high school in Lanzhou, Gansu Province, and joined the PLAAF.^{xi} He later served as the PC for the Ürümqi Command Post (Lanzhou MRAF), the PC for the 37th Air Division (Lanzhou MRAF), and the Director of the 15th Airborne Corps’ Political Work Department. In 2014 he became the PC of the 15th Airborne Corps. In September 2017, he became the PC of the Central TCAF and a concurrent Deputy PC of the Central TC. He received rank promotions in 2012 (MGEN), in July 2018 (LGEN), and in December 2020 (GEN). He was a Member of the CCP’s 19th Party Congress and the 13th NPC.

^x Note: Since all PLA ranks are based on the Army/Ground Force, Navy flag officers are identified as Navy Major Generals, Lieutenant Generals, and Generals. The PLA does not have an official English term for rear admiral, vice admiral, or admiral; however, the PLA often uses these terms in English language articles and when meeting face to face with foreigners. In addition, Air Force flag officers always have the term Air Force in front of their ranks, and are identified as Air Force Major Generals, Lieutenant Generals, and Generals.

^{xi} It is not clear if he joined as an enlisted member and then received a direct promotion as an officer within three years or if he was selected automatically as an officer.

LGEN Jiang Ping (姜平) (b. unknown) He became the PC of the Western TCAF and a concurrent Western TC Deputy PC in January 2019.³³ Starting in March 2013, he served as the PC of the PLAAF Aviation University. In June 2016, he became a Deputy Director of the PLAAF Headquarters' Political Work Department. He received a rank promotion in July 2014 (MGEN) and December 2019 (LGEN). He was a Member of the CCP's 13th NPC.

LGEN Liu Dawei (刘德伟) (b. 1958, Shandong Province) He became a Deputy Director of the CMC Political Work Department in August 2018.³⁴ He previously served as PC in the Air Force Aviation University and then as a Deputy Director of the PLAAF Political Department. In July 2015, he then became the PC of the Nanjing MRAF, which became the Eastern TCAF in January 2016, at which time he also became a concurrent Eastern TC Deputy PC. He received rank promotions in 2010 (MGEN) and July 2016 (LGEN).

He was a member of the CCP's 19th Party Congress Discipline Inspection Commission and the 13th NPC.

LGEN Wang Chengnan (王成男) (b. 1964, Jilin Province) He became the PC of the Central TCAF and a concurrent Central TC Deputy PC in May 2020.³⁵ Starting in the early 2000s, he served as a Deputy Director of the Air Force Aviation University's^{xii} Political Department, the PC for the 1st Air Division (Shenyang MRAF), and then a Deputy PC of the 15th Airborne Corps (Unit 95829). In July 2017, he became the PC of the Airborne Corps.^{xiii} From December 2019 until May 2020, he served as the Secretary of the PLAAF's Discipline Inspection Commission. He received rank promotions in May 2016 (MGEN) and in December 2019 (LGEN). He was a member of the CCP's 13th NPC and the Hubei Province's 12th People's Congress.

^{xii} The PLAAF Aviation University was created in 2004 as a corps-deputy-leader-grade organization.

^{xiii} Note: In April 2017, the PLAAF dropped the number 15 from the Airborne Corps' designation.

LGEN Xu Xisheng (徐西盛) (b. 1964, Shandong Province) He became the PC of the Southern TCAF and a concurrent Southern TC Deputy PC in June 2017.³⁶ He previously served as the PC in the Fuzhou Command Post (Nanjing MRAF) in the early 2010s. In February 2015, he became the Director of the Beijing MRAF Headquarters' Political Department and its successor, the Central TCAF Headquarters' Political Work Department. He received rank promotions in July 2013 (MGEN) and in July 2018 (LGEN).

He was a member of the CCP's 13th NPC.

LGEN Zhong Weiguo (钟卫国) (b. 1961, Zhejiang Province) He became the PC of the Eastern TCAF and a concurrent Eastern TC Deputy PC in June 2019.³⁷ He previously served in the 2000s as the Director of the Lanzhou MRAF Political Department's Cadre Division, and then the PC of the Ürümqi Command Post (Unit 93886) in the Lanzhou MRAF. In January 2012, he became the PC of the Nanning Base (Guangzhou MRAF). In January 2016, he became a Deputy PC for the Western TCAF. He received rank promotions in July 2012 (MGEN) and in December 2019 (LGEN). In 2012, he was a member of the Xinjiang Autonomous Region's 11th People's Congress.

Analysis of the Possible Contenders

Based on the information above for the nine possible contenders, the following bullets may help narrow down the pool, but no single name is presented as the definite replacement. Given that Yu's predecessor assumed his billet at age 62 and served for only three years before he reached his mandatory retirement age of 65 implies that all nine of the candidates are most likely eligible based on their age. Given that four of the potential candidates have served in two different billets at the TC deputy leader grade may indicate that they are at the top of the list. All nine of them will be eligible for their third star within one to two years after assuming their billet.

As noted for the previous 13 PCs, serving as a PLAAF Headquarters Deputy PC did not appear to be a criterion, while serving as the Director of the Political Department may have been important. However, only one of the nine possible contenders has served as a Deputy PC and only one has served as the Director of the Political Department. As such, neither of these billets may be a tie-breaker.

The addition starting in 2016 of the Secretary of the Discipline Inspection Commission to the Standing Committee as an equal to the Deputy PC and the Director of the Political Work Department may be an important criterion for selection as the new PC.

The ‘next Miao Hua’ wrinkle- aka Possible Non-PLAAF Contenders

Although the most likely successor for Yu Zhongfu is an Air Force officer, there is always the possibility that an officer from one of the other services could be selected. For example, Lieutenant General Miao Hua, who was a career Army officer, became the PLA Navy’s PC in December 2014 in a special ceremony for his transfer to the PLA Navy and “promote” him to Vice Admiral. He received a rank promotion to admiral in July 2015. When he became the Director of the Central Military Commission’s Political Work Department in October 2017, he retained his Navy uniform and Navy rank and is currently the only Navy officer on the CMC today.

Besides the nine PLAAF officers discussed above, the 2020 PRC Military Personality Directory has an additional 40 political officers with the grade of TC deputy leader and the rank of LGEN / VADM who are eligible to replace Yu Zhongfu.³⁸ Of course, other issues such as relationships, could also affect the selection one way or the other. An additional five officers only hold the rank of MGEN, so they would not be eligible to replace Yu. As such, one of the 40 officers with the rank of LGEN/VADM could switch from their current non-Air Force organization and become a PLAAF officer in order to fill the billet. The following bullets identify the billets that these non-PLAAF possible contenders hold:

- CMC Political Work Department (2 Deputy Directors)
- CMC Discipline Inspection Commission (3 Deputy Secretaries)
- PLA Army HQ (1 DPC, 1 DIC Secretary, 1 PWD Director)
- PLA Navy HQ (1 DPC, 1 DIC Secretary, 1 PWD Director)
- PLA Rocket Force HQ (1 DPC, 1 DIC Secretary, 1 PWD Director)
- PLA Strategic Support Force (1 DPC, 1 DIC Secretary, 1 PWD Director, 1 Space Systems Department PC, 1 Network Systems Department PC)
- 5 Theater Command HQ (2 DPC each)
- 5 Theater Command Army HQ (1 PC each)
- 3 Theater Command Navy HQ (1 PC each)
- Tibet and Xinjiang MDs (1 PC)
- Beijing Garrison (1 PC).

Appendix 1: PLAAF Party Congresses

This appendix provides a list of all of the key leaders in each of the 13 PLAAF Party Congresses, which have been held since 1956. As shown in the table below, all of the Commanders and PCs already held their position for some time and were not replaced during the Party Congress. Table 8 shows the 12 PLAAF Commanders and 12 of the 13 PCs,^{xiv} when they served, and where they overlapped with the 13 Party Congresses.³⁹ Of note, none of the key leaders were replaced during the 13th Party Congress. The 14th Party Congress will most likely take place in 2024, at which time there will already be a new Commander and PC.

Appendix 3: Yu Zhongfu's Meetings

A review found that Yu Zhongfu attended over 100 meetings from 2016 through 2019. The meetings can be divided into Party-related meetings, where he was always identified as the Party Secretary and the PC, and non-Party-related meetings, where he was always identified only as the PC. Tables below provide two examples for each year from 2016 through 2019 for Party-related and non-Party-related meetings, such as visits to units and participation in training conferences, respectively. For simplicity's sake, the acronyms YZF are used for Yu Zhongfu, MXT for former Commander Ma Xiaotian (2012-2017), and DLH for Commander Ding Laihang (2017-present). Each table is organized in chronological order. As a general rule, all of Yu's speeches during any of the meetings focused on political issues, with a particular emphasis on Party guidelines laid out by Xi Jinping.

Appendix 4 Grades and Ranks

Historically, the PLA has had a grade system rather than a rank system.⁵⁸ It established its first 21-grade system in 1952, which was revised five times, including reducing the number to 18 in 1979 and to 15 in 1988. The PLA had a rank system from 1955 to 1965, when it was abolished. A rank system was not reintroduced until 1988. As noted earlier, billets are defined by the grade system, not the rank system. As shown in Table 1 below, every grade up to CMC Member has two assigned ranks: a primary rank and a secondary rank. However, some ranks, such as Major General, can be assigned to four different grades. In addition, grade and rank promotions rarely occur at the same time. As a general rule, from Platoon leader grade to Regiment leader grade rank promotions occur every four years and grade promotions every three years, which defines the primary and secondary rank structure. All promotions up to the division level are local promotions that are approved at the next higher level. Promotions at the corps and above level are overseen by the CMC-level departments. Finally, as shown in the table, every grade has a mandatory retirement age. The age limit for Military Region (MR) leader-grade (now Theater Command / TC leader grade since 2016) billets was not implemented until the early 1990s.
